The Boston Park Plaza is a historic hotel in Boston, Massachusetts, USA, opened on March 10, 1927. It was built by hotelier E.M. Statler as part of his Statler Hotels chain. During the hotel's construction, it was discovered that the Statler's planned 155 foot height exceeded the maximum height of 125 feet allowed by the Massachusetts State Building Code. However it was granted an exemption by Mayor James Michael Curley.
